Sewer Ditch Laborers Granted an Eight-hour Day.

The laborers on the East South Temple sewer trench were exulting yesterday with representatives of organized labor unions over the announcement that the N. P. Glann Construction company had concluded to adopt the eighthour rule without any modification. All during last week the trench diggers were paid at the rate of 20 cents and hour, but the laborers were expected to work ten hours daily. This was objected to as ar evasion of the law prescribing eight hours as a day's labor on all public work, and the machinery of the county, attorney's office was invoked to enforce compliance with the law.

Yesterday morning Foreman Everil, representing the contracting company, announced that eight hours would con-The laborers on the East South Tem- , stitute a day's work on the trench, and

"When about 150 metres up in the air the young aeronaut discovered that a too zealeus workman had securely knotted the cord that controls the guide rope which governs the plane of direction of his airship. Before he could liberate this cord, as the guide rope was catching in the trees of the Boie de Boulogne, he had to sacrifice ail his ballast in order to get clear of the ground, or rather of the tree tops. Under such conditions he did not care to venture over Paris where a descent might have become unavoidable, owing to the lack of ballast.
